HEALTH AND BEAUTY

A young girl usually starts losing her "baby fat" when she approaches 12 or 13. From this point, until her early twenties she enjoys all the attributes that go with being a skinny adult. Firm figure, glowing skin and energy to burn.

This lovely state can't last forever, However, her eating habits and rest habits and the care she gives her hair and skin will prolong this period as well as make her enjoy better health all through life.

It is normal for young people to eat enormous amount of food. Their growing bodies need it. However, what kind of food they are eating is all important. A heavy intake of soda fountain specialities and starches will eventually show up on complexions, teeth and waistlines.

These over - rich goodies should be completely cut out. They most certainly must be cut down to two or three "treats" a week.

A diet rich in eggs, fish, meat and fresh fruit is all important. Protein is needed to help build healthy tissue, create energy and prevent starch - inspired fat from gaining a foothold.

It has been found that a well-rounded diet cuts down on the craving for large quantites of sweets.

As a person gets older he is able to function with few sleeping hours. During the teens more energy is burned during the day and a teenager needs "at least" 8 hours of sleep.

Insufficient cleaning when you are under twenty can result in real skin problems. Soap and water using lots of both-is the best complexion cleaner for most teenager skins.

Real skin problems and acne should always be brought to the attention of a doctor.
